The Coffee Sense

It's often said we have five senses. The first smell of coffee always helps me get out of bed. I always have an appetite for coffee in the morning. So while I don't have my eyes open, I can hear the coffee being made in the kitchen. I can smell and imagine the taste of the coffee. Yes, I like the taste of coffee. That sense encourages me to put my feet on the floor to get my first hot cup of fresh coffee for the day.

Generally, coffee is thought of as a bitter<sup>1</sup> drink. It's also considered to be very high in caffeine.<sup>2</sup> For many people, caffeine is the reason why coffee is so popular in the morning. When I was younger, I really liked the smell of coffee, but that was years before I began to appreciate coffee for both the taste and smell.

Coffee varies in taste, strength, and flavor. Adding too much water can change or weaken the coffee flavor. Also, different coffee pots and the style of heating and forcing water through the coffee grounds<sup>3</sup> will strengthen the coffee flavor. Additionally, coffee companies have secrets for changing the taste by drying and adding flavors into the coffee beans before they are ground. How fine the coffee beans have been ground can also be used to help improve coffee. Another option many people like is to add flavor to coffee with confectionaries<sup>4</sup> such as chocolate or vanilla. In some cases though, people prefer to simply add milk and sugar, and many others enjoy "black" coffee.

Even though coffee shops have been around for years, the popularity of coffee shop chains is at an all-time high. Things that improve these coffee shops' popularity include having free Wi-Fi, jazz music, more delicious coffee, comfortable seating, and even drive-thru<sup>5</sup> lanes to shorten the time while purchasing coffee from your car.

In spite of the fact that coffee is thought of as a hot drink in the morning, it's also very popular over ice, especially during the summer. Coffee can wake you in the morning, give you energy during the day, and be a drink to have while relaxing. So as young people consume coffee, it's normal to consider how coffee can be improved, but whatever the future, currently coffee is a trend both young and old people enjoy each day.
